We share the sense of shock and sadness expressed by so many in recent days and regret being too far away to attend the farewell service for Cousin Gordon. We so much enjoyed his visit to Scotland in Summer 2016. We shall write to family in a more personal way, but wanted them to know that we would be thinking of them on Friday.

[Gordon's father, who was born and brought up in Scotland, was my first cousin, although 20 years my senior. There are 5 surviving cousins of that generation on his father's side of the family - 3 in Scotland, 1 in the south of England and one in Boston, Mass. - and 9 'second cousins' in the next generation, Gordon was eager to know more about his family's Scottish roots and had hoped to return before long with his daughter and one of his sisters.They will always have a welcome here.]

I met Gord when he visited Scotland a few years ago; really enjoyed our conversation over dinner in Edinburgh. His father and my mother were cousins, which I think made us second cousins. All the FB tributes show how much he was admired and loved. Many condolences to his family and friends.

To the family of Gordon Charles Fulton,
I am so very sorry for your loss. Gordon was a friend of mine that was very special. He was always smiling and always cheered me up whenever I visited his shop. I was so glad to see he was opening another shop in Didsbury again. I hope his lovely dog has a home, he was so well trained by Gordon. I will help if you need a home for the sweet dog. I will miss them both dearly.
Sincerely,
Penny Bacon

Dear Tori and Peg,

We send our deepest sympathies. We have so many happy memories of good times together. So sorry it is not possible for us to be there for the celebration of life.

We will be in touch and hope to see you in the spring.

Love, Catherine and Norman

Yes, I was shocked to hear the news. I had just days before had a wonderful talk in his shop and signed up for one of his creative Christmas classes. I too was glad he had reopened his business. So young, so missed. My heartfelt condolences to his family.
